Exodus of Teachers Is Mounting

Little Rock, May 3 — (AP) — A mounting exodus of teachers from Arkansas has school officials looking for a way to patch the damage.

Delegates to the closing session of the Parents and Teachers Congress were told yesterday that many Arkansas schools probably would not open this fall because of a teacher shortage.

But at a meeting at the state capitol, about 50 education leaders began mapping a plan to fill the open jobs with substitutes — without lowering standards.

The officials, after an all-day session, decided to recommend to the state education department that a survey be made. They want to know the number of teachers who won't be around next fall, what the qualifications are of persons who might be obtained to replace them.

They also recommended that a survey be made of all persons whose college training would enable them to meet minimum teaching requirements. These persons, they said, should be approached on the idea of taking refresher courses so they would be available in case of an emergency.

A. B. Wetherington, finance director of the state education department, sounded the warning that some schools might not open. He told the PTA meeting that the teacher shortage will be made more acute by the fact that beginning July 1 the state by law, cannot allocate salary aid to teachers who do not have at least one year of college training.

The number one reason for the steady departure of Arkansas Teachers appeared to be the lure of higher salaries in neighboring states and of good paying jobs in defense-industry.

Arkansas schools, hampered by a fund shortage, are in no position to bid for the services of more capable teachers, the PTA congress was told.

A stepped-up public relations campaign was seen as an outgrowth of the current school crisis. Several delegates to the congress said that top priority would be given to informing the public about the school program.

Money Asked for Bank Work on River

Washington, May 3 — (AP) — A plea for funds for bank stabilization work along the Arkansas river was carried to congress today by an Arkansas delegation.

Specifically, the Arkansas group is asking the house appropriations committee to approve $17,500,000 for bank stabilization in Arkansas and Oklahoma, $700,000 for planning work in the two states and $5,500,000 for the Boeuf and Tenness rivers and Bayou Macon project.

An appropriations subcommittee now is hearing testimony on appropriations for flood control and river and harbor projects for the year starting July 1.

The Arkansas group was scheduled to appear sometime today. Heading it is J. W. Hull, of Russellville, president, and Fred A. Smith, executive director, of the Arkansas Resources and Development commission.

President Truman's budget calls for only $100,000 planning funds for the river in Arkansas.

In a statement for the committee, the Arkansas Basin association asks 15,000,000 for bank stabilization work in Arkansas.

It also asks these funds for planning: Dardanelle dam in Arkansas $250,000, Ozark dam in Arkansas $100,000, and $100,000 on river control work.

The statement said that 700,000 acres of rich farm land along the river is protected by levees and these lands, together with thousands of unprotected acres are subject to destruction by meanderings of the river. In addition, constant umblin of bank—where the banks have not been stabilized, destroys much rich land.

Bank cave-ins said the statement also threatens 117 crossings of the Arkansas by highways, railways, pipe lines, water lines and transmission lines.

"We who know the river know that a stabilized river is essential," said the statement. The association pointed to these areas most needing attention: Braden's bend, near Van Buren, McLean and Hartman bottoms, below Dardanelle, Morrilton cut-off area, downstream from Little Rock, above Pine Bluff, below Pine Bluff.

In addition to $3,500,000 for the Boeuf, Tenness and Bayou Macon project, the association also recommended $250,000 for channel work on the Petit Jean river.

Another group from Arkansas due to appear includes H. K. Thatcher of Camden and Fred Kirkpatrick of Benton. This group is to seek funds to maintain the Ouachita river channel, and for Blakely mountain reservoir.

Mayor B. R. McCarty of Texarkana Ark., and Mayor Carroll Shiffer of Texarkana, Tex., were to appear today to request $4,500,000 to complete the Texarkana dam.

Reps. Norrell, Hays, Tackett, Harris and Trimble are to accompany the Arkansas delegation before the committee.

One Arkansas group including C. Bond and W. G. Huxtable of Marion, and Charles Lawrence of

DOROTHY DIX

Flagrant Infidelity

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 25 years old, have been married for ten years and have two children, aged 8 and 1. My marriage has been far from a happy one, since I have had a philandering husband the full ten years. We have been separated and I have worked. We have gone back together, he would promise faithfully to be true, I have broken up many of his love affairs. He doesn't drink or gamble. He hasn't taken much interest in his children, or put forth any effort to improve our small home.

For a few months I can be happy, then for several months I am miserable. I haven't been well for the past six months but my doctor says I won't feel better until I get out of this mess. I have my two small children to consider. Would it be right to deny them a father and the things he can give them? So I might have peace of mind? Is there any future for me or for the children living like this? Is there ever a cure for a philandering husband?

ANSWER: Your husband doesn't take much interest in his children or his home; he certainly can't have much concern for you and act the way he does, say I can't see where the future holds much for any of you. The only thing you seem to be getting out of the marriage is support and your husband will have to support you and the children even if you leave him. I can see little point in going through the misery of a marriage that is little more than a farce.

Patience May Be Solution

You don't give your husband's age, but as you were only 15 when you married, he probably wasn't much older. Immaturity may be the basis for his philandering and if you're patient you may wait around for him to grow up.

Look to your own ways too. Are you providing him with a pleasant, cheery, well-kept home with good home cooking? Do you resist nagging him about his affairs or other deficiencies? Do you go out with him, or do the children keep you in? A baby-sitter, hired occasionally to give you an evening's dancing with your husband, might be a good investment.

If you think over all these points and are still convinced that you are married to a chronic philanderer, you'll either have to accept the fact and settle down to make the best of it or separate. In other words: half a husband, or none.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am in love with a fine girl who has all the qualities that I admire in a woman, but my three years at college will mean that I will be thrown with a different group of people and a different environment from my home town. I will come in contact with many girls very different from the one I love. Will I be able to remain true to her in this new atmosphere? Through your experience with youth you must have some examples of this type of problem and I would like to know how they generally work out.

ANSWER: I have known many cases like yours of a boy tying him self up in an engagement to a girl before starting off to college, and I have seen very few of them at

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS WASTE

Nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headache and dizziness may be due to slow-down of kidney function. Doctors say good kidney function is very important to good health. When some very bad conditions, such as strain and stress, slow this important function, a slow-down, many times sufferer gets backache, loss of pep and energy. Many times get backache due to cold or wrong diet may be due to slow-down of kidney function. The kidneys are the body's waste disposal system. They remove waste from the blood and excrete it in the form of urine. If the kidneys are not working properly, waste builds up in the blood and causes all kinds of trouble. It is important to keep the kidneys in good working order. A diet of fresh fruits and vegetables, and plenty of water, will help keep the kidneys healthy. Avoid salt, sugar, and fatty foods. Get plenty of rest and exercise. If you have backache, loss of pep and energy, headache and dizziness, consult your doctor. He may recommend a kidney treatment.

Tried Burr

John Marshall was the presiding judge when Aaron Burr was tried for treason. The trial ended when the chief justice declared that an act of treason must first be proved and then Burr must be connected with it. The government was not able to convict Burr of even a misdemeanor.

Stabilization Board Named by Truman

Washington, May 3 — (AP) — President Truman today named the members of the new wage stabilization board which will have increased powers in the mobilization program.

Six of the 18 members will represent the public and equal numbers will speak for labor and management.

Mr. Truman created the board after a revolt by organized labor leaders wrecked the wage panel set up originally under the mobilization program.

The new board will have authority to handle labor disputes in addition to passing on wage problems under the stabilization program. Labor leaders had demanded that power for the group.

Mr. Truman named to serve with Chairman George Taylor the following five other public members:

Clark Kerr of California, a member of the old nine-member board, vice chairman; Nathan P. Feininger, professor of law at the University of Wisconsin; William M. Hepburn, dean of a law school in Georgia; John Dunlop of Massachusetts, another member of the old board; and Frederick H. Burton, of New York, former secretary of the New York state mediation board.

The six industry members are: Milton M. Eisenhower, director of industrial relations for the Owens-Illinois Glass Co., Toledo, O.; Alexander R. Heron, director of industrial relations for the Crown-Zellerbach Corp., San Francisco; Richard P. Ingherty, director of employer-employee relations for the National Association of Broadcasters, Washington, D. C.; and Henry G. J. Robertson, Jr., of Ohio, all holdovers from the old board.

Laborites in Britain Beat Off Churchill

London, May 2 — (AP) — Britain's quabbling Socialists closed their ranks solidly last night to beat off a divide and conquer maneuver engineered by a chuckling Winston Churchill.

Taking his cue from the rebel laborites own protests over rearment, the Conservative leader came up with a cagily worded motion designed to draw the dissident Socialists into voting against the government.

But the rebels refused to be taken in. They kept a solid party front that defeated Churchill's motion by a 13-vote margin — 305-292 — and left Prime Minister Atlee still clinging to control of the government.

Churchill sent in deputy Conservative Leader Anthony Eden to offer a motion expressing the anxiety of the house that the fear-mongering program "was based on estimates of defense production which were not accepted by the ministers principally concerned."

The reference was to Aneurin Bevan and Harold Wilson, who resigned as labor minister and board of trade president in protest over the budget.

But both Bevan and Wilson refused to be put on the spot. Along with other Labor party left wingers, they voted for the government.

Both Bevan and Wilson had assailed the rearment program as incapable of fulfillment, unless more aid was forthcoming from the U. S., but neither went so far as to refuse to accept the production estimates.

Commenting on the Tory maneuver, Bevan declared:

"I hope that before long the house will have an opportunity of discussing this matter in the absence of old fashioned parliamentary jousting."

"When that opportunity occurs, I hope to discuss the matter in more serious context than the opposition have afforded us this afternoon."

Churchill was in top hunting form all evening. Toward the close of the debate Defense Minister Emanuel Shinwell started to say he was aware of the Conservative motion "was designed to weaken any cleavage that might exist in talks of the Labor party."

But Churchill broke in to remark "I do not want your assistance."

Japs Observe Anniversary of Constitution

Tokyo, May 3 — — Emperor Hirohito and his empress gave three banquets today for the Japanese constitution that strips them of their imperial powers.

Banquet means "Live 10,000 years."

The royal couple yelled it three times before 12,000 Japanese celebrating the fourth anniversary of the document.

This may be the last anniversary that Japan celebrates as an occu-pled nation. By next year, the 63,000,000 Japanese expect to be run by a treaty. By next year, the 33-treaty, fully giving them that right, is expected to be signed soon.

The dapper little monarch, in gray-striped trousers and morning coat, was the attraction at a constitution day ceremony on the plaza before his palace grounds.

His chubby wife, smiling Empress Nagako, stood at his side. She wore the rigidly prescribed court dress, which looks like an evening gown of the 1920s.

One after another, Japan's civil leaders stepped forward, bowed to the emperor and then lauded the constitution. Each turned his back on the man they once called divine and spoke directly to the 12,000 facing them.

As each finished his speech, he bowed again to Hirohito. The emperor nodded in reply.

At the close of the ceremony a Tokyo assemblyman led the crowd in three car-splitting banquets for the constitution.

Hirohito and his wife shouted banzai and raised their hands three times in the traditional salute.

Hirohito was bailing the national law that reduced him from divine status to a symbol of the state.

The small, bespectacled ruler, once sacred and inviolable, seems to welcome the change. He has gained confidence with each public appearance. He has lost his oldtime nervousness.

A hundred labor demonstrators broke out in song once during the ceremony—the only untoward incident. Police carted 28 of them off to jail, one by the heels.

Chinese Red Propaganda Sent to U. S.

Washington, May 3 — (AP) — The Chinese Communists are trying to peddle their propaganda in this country and pick up American cash for doing it.

The outlines of the campaign were disclosed today by inquiries set off when copies of an English-language periodical called "People's China" were received by the Associated Press bureau in Washington.

The envelopes carried a Hong Kong stamp and postmark but the masthead of the magazine itself said it was published Feb. 16 in Peking, Red Chinese capital, by "foreign languages press."

A separate supplement inserted between the pages of the magazine carried the text of a statement by Red China's foreign minister, Chou En-lai, "on the illegal U. N. Feb. 1 resolution."

That resolution charged the Communist regime with aggression in Korea. In the publication proper were articles under such headings as "Imperialist America Wants War, Not Peace," diatribes against U. S. rejection of Red China's proposals for settling the Korean trouble on Communist terms, and "the first year of the Sino-Soviet treaty," two pages of praise and thanks for aid claimed to have been received by China from the Soviet Union.

Enclosed with the magazine was a subscription sales dodger offering the semi-monthly magazine at "reduced rates" quoted in Russian rubles, U. S. dollars, and Indian, British and Hong Kong money. The yearly rate in the U. S. was $2.50.

The dodger offered "regular news and information about the great developments that are taking place in new China."

On the sheet was a notation that subscriptions might be obtained through International News company and Stecher-Hafner, Inc., both New York publishers' agents with extensive business in foreign publications.

A reporter telephoned both firms seeking information about the magazine. Both replied they knew nothing except what they had seen in sample copies. Both denied they had authorized use of their names as agents.

High Cuthbert, manager of the International firm, volunteered the information that the Peking publishers are "sending copies all over" with the subscription offer.

And he said "People's China" is only one of a number of such publications.

Begin at a point on the East line of South Hazel Street, 75 feet South of the southwest corner of Lot 4, Block 62, City of Hope, and run in a northerly direction 75 feet along the east line of South Hazel Street to the southwest corner of said Lot 4, thence easterly and parallel with the south line of said Lot 4 200 feet, thence south 100 feet, thence westerly 105 feet to the point of beginning.

Mississippi Still Threat in 4 States

By The Associated Press. Skies cleared today over midwestern flood areas but serious overflows still threatened along the Mississippi river in Iowa, Illinois and Missouri.

Light rain fell last night in parts of Iowa and northern Missouri but no further downpours were in prospect today.

Engineers watched for breaks in levees along the Iowa-Illinois-Missouri stretch of the Mississippi. The big stream receded slightly at Muscatine, Ia., one of the critical areas. A levee break below Alexandria, Mo., yesterday caused the flooding of about 2,500 acres of farm land.

Most of the country had fair weather today. Rain fell in the middle Pacific coast region.

Temperatures remained above normal over most sections. Chilly spots were the New England states and locally along the Pacific coast. The mercury dropped to near freezing in northern Maine.

Conditions which have begun to appear in this country under similar circumstances.

Cuthbert said he had forwarded a couple of volunteer subscriptions to Peking but had heard nothing in return.

B. M. Leasing, manager of the periodicals department for Stecher-Hafner, said that in the past he had handled several volunteer subscriptions but they all came from such buyers as university libraries.

Public Gets Off Easiest in Crime Probe

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, May 2 —(AP)—The one who gets off easiest in the report of the Kefauver crime committee — although no one is more deeply involved — is John Q. Public.

"If people didn't gamble, there wouldn't be any gambling. And it's the gambling of a great many people which makes crime syndicates possible. It's as simple as that and as simple as this:

Every bet made in violation of the law — with a lottery peddler, on the green felt of a dice table, or with a street corner bookmaker — helps break down the law and encourages crime.

And then, in their fierce desire to rake in citizen John's two bucks, bribe public officials, corrupt government, bump one another off, and make a snail in America life.

The Kefauver committee must have sighed over the problem — how to get people to quit gambling — for about the harshest thing it had to say about the public was this:

"The 52 horse better and the 5-cent numbers player are not only suckers because they are gambling against hopeless odds, but they also provide the money's which enable underworld characters to undermine our institutions."

Having said that, the committee must have figured it was hopeless to try to reform million of people. So it went on for 195 pages to explain how widespread and vicious crime is and how it has reached into high places.

The committee made some recommendations for cutting down on crime, but not for cutting it out. The committee disapproved of ever wiping it out entirely, for it said:

"The committee is convinced that there is no single, economic and political evidence that have been uncovered in the many cities in which it has made investigations and held hearings.

"The committee feels, nevertheless, that while organized crime cannot be completely eliminated from our society, this is no reason for defeatism, for vigorous law enforcement can control organized crime to the point where it is no longer a menace to our institutions."

The work of the committee won sensational headlines and then, about a month ago, was actually more in the public eye than any congressional committee in history.

This was when it climaxed a year's investigations by letting its New York hearings be televised. The committee estimates that 30,000,000 people watched, and it says:

"These telecasts... have had a most salutary effect in awakening the public to the menace of organized racketeering that confronts our national life."

There's probably no doubt that TV spectacle had that effect on many people. But it probably had quite a different effect on many others, those who make bets pretty regularly, violating the law, helping the mobsters.

For them, watching the big-time operators takes a grilling, there probably were some sharp twinges of conscience, knowing that they themselves, even though only in a small way, had a hand in helping

KILLER'S PACE

BY JULIUS LONG

Copyright, 1951 by NEA Service, Inc.

PERSPHATION rolled down Carl Prater's face. "I didn't kill Frankie Martin. I had nothing to do with it at all."

"Then why did you come here, Prater?" I asked.

"I'm going to kill you. I have to do it. It's that or ruin. I'm too old a man to see everything go that I worked for."

Before he could do anything there was a loud pounding on my door. Prater started and I was on him fast. I brought the heel of my right hand against his wrist and jarred the revolver loose. I shoved his face with my left and sent him sprawling. I scooped up the revolver and pointed it at him, but he didn't get up.

I thrust the revolver into my holster, went to the door and opened it. It was Merica and Sergeant Cost was behind him.

"Come in, gentlemen. There's just been an accident. Mr. Prater's suffered a heart attack. Or maybe a stroke—he looks as if he has high blood pressure."

Cost sneered: "We heard the ruckus! You snatched him down!"

Cost got City Hospital on my phone. Merica motioned and we lifted Prater to my davenport. He was heavy and cumbersome.

"I suppose I ought to congratulate you on cleaning out the rest of the LaGrange gang," said Merica. "They nearly got you, didn't they?"

"I guess they did," I said. "What were you doing in Valleyville?"

"Buying flowers for an old friend that had died."

Cost said: "Let's take him downtown. It's about time anyway. He hasn't got much time to produce Frankie Martin's killer the way he boasted he would."

I indicated the prone figure on the davenport. "That's your boy, big crime."

The committee seemed to think this was so, for its report on TV adds:

"For the first time the public was able to see and hear the notorious hoodlums to whom it was, in one form or another paying tribute, to determine for itself whether or not these men are wholesome influences in public affairs and whether they should be permitted to wax even more powerful than they are now."

One good way to determine how aroused the public has become is to see what steps the people, nationwide, are taking to stamp out this kind of corruption. There has been to date something less than frenzy for reform.

The committee made 29 recommendations on steps it thinks are needed, to keep down big-time crime, 22 of them involving action by congress and federal agencies.

Under this sharp prod from the committee, the federal agencies probably will carry out the recommendations affecting them. But the most important recommendations require action by congress in passing new laws and patching up some old ones.

What will congress do? Probably not much. This isn't said cynically. Congress is always pretty slow passing new laws or changing old ones, and very slow indeed unless

He was waiting for me with this. I took out the nickel-plated revolver and passed it over to Merica.

"I took it away from him, and the excitement was too much for his heart. Or his blood pressure. Anyway, he killed Frankie Martin—that's certain. He heard me promise to turn in the killer in 24 hours, and he figured I had the goods on him."

MERICA eyed me disdainfully. "You're off the beam, Marshall. Prater couldn't have killed Frankie Martin. We know all about that mink coat Prater gave her. He looked sure-fire when we found out he was at the club that night. He, Wertheim, his sales manager, and two prospects. They all sat through the first show. Then they left. Later they came back and watched the second show, Prater and the two prospects, that is. Frankie wasn't in the second show—she went off the bridge during it."

"You're sure about the alibi?"

"Of course. There were plenty of witnesses as to the time of the crash and lots more as to Prater's whereabouts. The two prospects were respectable undertakers. I'm sure of Prater's alibi as I'm sure he's going to sign that affidavit against you for messing with the evidence at the Bidauld house!"

"So you'll take the affidavit of a man who broke into my apartment and tried to kill me?"

"You say he did? It could be the other way around."

I would have laughed if I hadn't known it would come out sour. I sat around woozily while the ambulance was coming, and when the crew had carried out fat-so, I told Merica:

"Pardon my manners, but I'm tagged out. Mind taking a walk?"

They left. But I hadn't said that I meant to get some sleep, and I didn't intend to for some time yet. I went into the bath and got out a little box of pills. I'm not a benzadrine-eater, but I realized that it was high time I began to kick my brains around a little so a bright answer would come to the top.

I wondered why Merica and Cost had dropped in on me. Maybe they had meant to grab me. The deadline had been almost up.

I went back into my bedroom and reached under some shirts into the back of my middle dresser drawer. I found the automatic I had come back to my apartment for.

I loaded the gun and put it in my holster and felt much better. Then I put out the lights and left my apartment without bothering to lock it. Everybody seemed to know how to make the lock.

I DROVE to the Brentwood Arms and parked in the drive. I went in the front door and up to the desk. The clerk looked me over with forgivable curiosity.

"Mr. Marshall to see Mr. Larry Stone."

The clerk looked as if he didn't think there was a chance that I would see him. He asked perfunctorily:

"Mr. Stone expecting you?"

"No, but he'll see me. You ring his apartment?"

"Go right up. It's 10B."

"I know." I went to Stone's apartment. I pushed the button and Stone opened the door.

"What do you want, Marshall?"

"To talk to you, inside."

He frowned. "I haven't time. I'm busy."

"But not that busy?" I had the automatic out. Stone's eyes widened, and he paled. "Open up!"

He opened up. "All right, Marshall, I'll talk to you. But put away that gun!"

"Not just yet." I gestured with it, and we went into Stone's sitting room. There was a half-empty highball glass on a coffee table before a davenport, and a cigar tray filled with stubs.

Asks Approval of Budget's Flood Request

Washington, May 2 —(AP)—Congress was asked today by former Rep. Whittington D-Miss. to approve President Truman's budget request for $81,000,000 for flood control work on the lower Mississippi river and its tributaries in the year starting July 1.

Whittington was a witness before a house appropriations subcommittee considering allocations to river and flood control projects.

"Under ordinary circumstances and under normal conditions," Whittington said in a statement to the committee, "I would insist that the amount be increased."

But now, he said, "I do not ask for any increase."

"I believe that the President was wise in recommending $81,000,000 for the next fiscal year and that congress will be justified in appropriating this amount."

Whittington led a seven-state group seeking approval of the budgeted $1,000,000.

Last year congress appropriated $68,442,000 to the project, which includes work in Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana and Illinois.

An economy cut, however, reduced available funds later to $61,000,000.

The hearing was not open to the press or public.

Rep. Frank Smith D-Miss. told the committee in a statement that people of the Mississippi valley "realize the crying need for economy in all the functions of our government and we have modified our requests in line with this need."

even though this means the sacrifice of many projects essential to our welfare."

At Fort Leonard Wood, Brig. Gen. Samuel D. Sturgis, Jr., said Pettit "was never denied medical treatment x x x and he did not leave the fort without permission."

Pettit's mother, Mrs. Harry W. Pettit, said in Kansas City Monday her son was smuggled from the camp as he was unable to walk. She said three buddies took him out without a pass so he could get medical treatment.

Sturgis said Pettit had a "class A" pass which allowed him to leave the post on all normal off-duty hours. The general said one of Pettit's buddies, Pvt. Jackie Dickey of Kansas City, told him that he and two other buddies took Pettit to the fort's bus station and Pettit and Dickey said Pettit limped but was able to walk."

Army Probes Hospital Need Report

By The Associated Press

A reported shortage of military hospital facilities is being investigated by the army with hope of an agreement whereby military cases may be transferred to civilian hospitals.

The probe was started, an army official in Los Angeles said last night, after disclosure of the death of an infantry private and a sergeant's infant son. Both had been denied immediate medical attention, the army said.

The army's investigation followed the report from Chicago of a father smuggling his soldier-son from Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., after the soldier complained he was not getting proper medical treatment. The army draftee, Pvt. Stanley Amborski, 21, was reported improving from virus pneumonia at the Great Lakes naval hospital.

At the same time, the commanding general of Ft. Leonard Wood said a Kansas City soldier was not smuggled from the camp by three buddies last December and had not been refused medical treatment. The soldier, Pvt. William Pettit, 23, is at the Army and Navy hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., suffering arthritis.

In Los Angeles, Col. Sidney F. Dunn, commander of Ft. MacArthur, said that "the trouble is that military enlistments are increasing while medical facilities are being cut back."

At Fort Leonard Wood, Brig. Gen. Samuel D. Sturgis, Jr., said Pettit "was never denied medical treatment x x x and he did not leave the fort without permission."

Pettit's mother, Mrs. Harry W. Pettit, said in Kansas City Monday her son was smuggled from the camp as he was unable to walk. She said three buddies took him out without a pass so he could get medical treatment.

WU Fears a Strike, Asks Rate Hike

New York, May 2.—(U.P.)—The Western Union Telegraph Co. today asked the federal communications commission for permission to increase its domestic telegraph rates to provide about $11,000,000 for a cost-of-living wage raise to its employees.

The company, in its new rate schedule filed with the FCC in Washington, asked that the increased rates become effective for interstate messages on June 1.

The revised schedules provide for an increase of approximately 8.8 per cent in total charges for telegraph messages and money orders. The company estimates they will provide additional overall gross annual revenue of about $14,000,000, and estimated additional overall net annual revenues of approximately $11,000,000.

The increase in telegraph zone rates would be partly offset by higher wordage allowance. For the first time in 100 years the company would depart from its historical 10-word telegraph minimum. Under the revised schedules, the minimum would be 15 words, instead of 10, in telegrams and 50 words instead of 25 in night letters.

A 15-word full rate message in the lowest rate zone would cost 50 cents under the new rates compared with the present charge of 45 cents.

Additional word rates in the new schedules range from two to six cents each, against the present charge of two to 10 cents a word. Day press messages would be charged at one-half the full rate charge, and night press messages at one-fourth the full rate, compared to present charges of one-third and one-sixth respectively. The company figured the net result would be a 15 per cent increase in press charges.
